Textbook: Krugman, Paul and Robin Wells. (2009). Macroeconomics, Worth Publishers, 2nd edition

Prereq: Econ 2010 (Principles of Microeconomics)

Description

Macroeconomics is the study of the economy as a whole. It examines the aggregate behavior of the economy. This is different from microeconomics, which is the study of the economic behavior of individual consumers, rms, and industries. We will study how economists model the relationships between aggregate economic variables and examine how various—scal and monetary policies can a ect the results. The main goal of this class will be to improve your economic literacy and ability to apply economic models to analyze world events

Recitation

Recitation is intended to give further insight into what you learn in lecture. To that end your recitation assignments and grades will be designed to reinforce what you learn in lecture. Your TA will grade you in recitation as they see t, and will explain their policy in class. Recitations begin the second week of class.

Grading

Grade Breakdown: Three Midterms 20% each Recitation 20% Final exam 40%

For this class we will be following the book rather closely. However, I may use examples or ideas not the weight of that midterm will be replaced by your recitation grade. In other words, if you miss a midterm this will count as your dropped grade. If you miss two midterms, the second will count as a zero on your nal grade. You cannot reschedule or miss your nal exam unless you have three nals on the same day. If this is the case you must bring me evidence of the three exams within the rst four weeks of the semester.

There will be no extra credit assignments this semester and no attendance policy. However, on three random occasions during the semester I will take attendance and everyone in class will get a point added to their nal grade.
